

Pacific Coast Gossip

By ARTHUR LANGTON

IMPROVEMENT of present layouts rather than construction of new greens, tees, and fairways, is the order of the day on the courses of the Pacific coast at the present time. During this season, which in past years has seen intense activity in the way of new work, there has been no sign of clubs opening their purses for anything but absolutely routine work.

The reason for this reticence is obvious; although the country may be on the way out of the current financial quagmire, people will not begin spending money on golf courses until their financial stability is assured.

While this situation in which club officials demand that expenditures be cut till it hurts, is fraught with difficulties for the greenkeepers, it must not be forgotten that there is no time like the present for a course superintendent to prove himself worthy of the name. A number of courses on the Coast have discharged their greenkeepers or are contemplating doing so in a last desperate attempt to keep going.

Although none of these courses were very firm economic institutions in the best of times, their actions will serve as a warning to greenkeepers to demonstrate to their employers that the cheapest method in the long run is to retain them.

NOW is the time to prepare to

IRRIGATE YOUR FAIRWAYS
THIS SUMMER

Remember, it is the way you irrigate them that counts. Water properly applied will carry your course through the driest season, and, as you know, a well-kept course is always a popular course. Keep your fairways in June condition the season through with

SPRINKLERS

There are more Buckner Sprinklers and valves in use on the golf courses of the United States than all other makes of similar equipment combined. Only superior performance could create this overwhelming preference. Write for literature.

Western economy is taking various forms on golf courses. Shrubs, trees, and plants do not receive the attention that they once did. Golfers are experiencing more difficulty in getting out of rough grass which has not been trimmed. Only the most essential portions of the courses are receiving attention from the irrigation crews.

Flags are not changed as often as formerly, nor does the woodwork receive as much paint. Courses which already have them are finding hoseless irrigation systems tremendous labor savers, in some cases enabling greenkeepers to find other work for their night irrigation gangs. Nature during the past few weeks has helped out handsomely by doing the unexpected and sending enough rain to approach normal and surpass the total of last year.

However, a certain amount of activity other than routine work is going on in the Pacific area as is evidenced by the fact that the Red Hill Golf Club of Uplands, California, is putting down nine new greens with all the attendant improvements. Everyone who has driven into or out of Hollywood by way of Ventura boulevard, and nearly everyone has done this or hopes to at some time or other, has passed the Hollywood Country club which has one side exposed to the highway.

Recently the club sold some of its property bordering upon the boulevard and as a consequence is building three new greens. A number of people have expressed the hope that the course still will be plainly visible because it acts as a landmark to those who approach the Promised Land of Hollywood after threading their way through the devious paths to the north.

This is the season when brown patch begins to get in its dirty work again. Jack Wilson at the Rio Hondo course near Los Angeles, reports that of eighteen bent greens, only the three planted with the Cocos variety remained immune.

Mid-West Notes

THE May meeting of the Midwest Greenkeepers' Association will be held the 25th at the Chikaming Country Club, at Lakeside, Michigan.

A joint meeting of the Board of Directors and the Executive Committee was called to consider the advisability of changing the name of this organization to some other name, which would perhaps better fit the type of work our membership is engaged in. Following lengthy discussions, the question was put to a vote. The officers attending this meeting were unanimous in recommending that the name Midwest Greenkeepers' Association be retained.

At the regular April meeting the membership also approved of continuing the use of the name Midwest
