

commend their products for use on new or model home lawns to "increase the sales potential." Coloring of lawns in a development will certainly make homes appear more attractive; and the idea seems fine if the grass which is sprayed is quality turf to begin with. However, applicators should avoid collaboration with unscrupulous developers who may want to spray a "lawn" of pasture sod and pass it off as quality grass.

Artificial turf-colorant sprays may be considered as an added service for turf maintenance contractors, but as pointed out earlier, color sprays are not a substitute for good maintenance practices.

Two Unusual New Mowers Unveiled by Bolens Div.

Two new "workhorses" designed for professional turf maintenance have been announced by Bolens Div., FMC.

The new Husky 1000, said to be designed for all-day duty on the largest lawns, park areas, and country-sized gardens, is powered by a 10-hp Wisconsin short-stroke, 4-cycle, industrial-type engine. It has a power range lever with six speeds forward and two reverse, and a Bolens exclusive controlled differential for elimination of wheel spinning on heavy jobs.

The compact Estate Keeper is described by the manufacturer as a radical departure from compact tractor design. It can circle trees and shrubs, cut square corners, and edge up to walks.

For complete details, write Bolens Div., FMC Corp., Dept. 78, 215 South Park St., Port Washington, Wis.

An ideal way for lawn spray firms to offer contract mowing at moderate investment is found in Bolens' Estate Keeper, company says.
