Rohm and Haas Announces Two New Emulsifiers

Two new agricultural emulsifiers, Triton X-189 and Triton X-190, have been announced by Rohm and Haas Co., Philadelphia, Pa. Of special importance to formulators, says the company, is that both products are exempt from tolerance requirements established by the Food and Drug Administration.

Triton X-180 and Triton X-190 offer optimum performance in the emulsification of the organo-phosphate group of pesticides, either alone or in combination with chlorinated hydrocarbons, the company claims.

In addition, the two new emulsifiers are compatible with commonly used pesticide solvents. Both products also perform satisfactorily in soft or hard waters with only slight changes in their proportions.

Triton X-180 and Triton X-190 are anhydrous blends of alkyl polyether alcohols and organic sulfonates, the company discloses. Triton X-180 is predominately nonionic. Its companion product is predominantly anionic.
