The Cover

You don't need to mow it, fertilize it, weed it, or water it. You just look at it and enjoy it. That's what the proponents of Crownvetch say. It's hard to get started, but the rewards come later. The result can be like the cover picture, taken along Interstate 80 in Pennsylvania. Crownvetch is planted along the entire length of this super highway from New Jersey to the Ohio line. But highways are just one area the legume can be used. Anywhere there is a slope that needs to be preserved and landscaped, Crownvetch is a prospect. The cover feature discusses why, beginning on page 6.
