have learned how to make the material, normally a precursor of the gypsy moth pheromone, or sex attractant.

In tests last year, Dr. Doane and Dr. Ring Cardé of the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station confined scented female moths in sticky traps. Within 15 minutes, 20 to 40 males were commonly attracted to one scented female. When a tiny amount of the inhibitor was placed in the trap near the female, males approached but immediately flew away without entering the trap.

This year the inhibitor will be dispersed over a small area to evaluate its ability to prevent mating of females in their natural environment.

Dr. Doane will also continue his research on a virus disease that commonly decimates gypsy moth larvae populations. But it does so after infestations become heavy, which means after a year or two of heavy defoliation.

This year Dr. Doane will introduce the virus artificially into what he has determined is a new infestation, essentially virus-free.

Any one of several outcomes is possible. He may be able to reduce sharply the number of gypsy moth larvae before they have caused excessive defoliation. Or examination of eggs laid by this 1973 generation may show that a high percentage of them are carrying the virus.
