

Insecticide now in low-odor formulation

Dursban turf insecticide has been improved, say sources at Dow Chemical Co.

"The new formulation is low in odor while providing LCOs with outstanding efficacy and residuality," says product marketing manager Rob Peterson.

An added feature of the new Dursban is that it will not move out of the application zone, thus providing safety, says Dow.

"LCOs can use this product and be confident that it is safe for applicators, homeowners, and neighbors when applied according to label directions," Peterson observes.

Aerators help kill algae problems

Otterbine Floating Aerators are designed to biologically treat the true causes of algae, according to their manufacturer.

Barebo, Inc. recently developed the Phoenix and Constellation floating mechanical aerators, which greatly enhance aesthetic appeal, are easy to install and maintain, and are economically priced.

The Phoenix (shown here) combines two spray patterns in one unit with the geyser pattern of a 5-hp motor. The Constellation creates an array of multi-leveled sprays. The center unit can be any Otterbine

Arsenal herbicide controls vegetation

Arsenal herbicide provides total vegetation control, according to its manufacturer, Cyanamid Agricultural Division.

When Arsenal enters plants through foliage and roots, it seeks out and accumulates in the growing points, inhibiting plant production of three vital amino acids. Even though measurable growth of treated plants ceases within hours, the brown-out process is slow.

Arsenal can be used on rights-of-way, non-irrigated ditchbanks, fence rows, and storage areas. Depending on climate, it can last up to one year.
