DUDECK'S A GRANDDAD...LM editorial advisor Dr. A.E. Dudeck (University of Florida) became a grandfather on Oct. 5th. Daughter Kathy Collart gave birth to Timothy Collart at 9:31 a.m. Dudeck says that waiting in the delivery room with son-in-law Dave, "brought back memories of 30 years ago; I felt like an expectant father again." Congratulations to the Dudeck family.

PROMOTING SAFETY...A new "ALCA Supervisor's Safety Handbook" is available from the Associated Landscape Contractors of America. The book covers safety policies, meetings, proper clothing, general first-aid, equipment certification, material handling and (are you listening?) chemical safety. The book is available to members for $4; non-members can get it for $20 (maybe it's time you joined...?). Contact ALCA at (703) 241-4004; order by fax at (703) 532-0463.

IN COLLEGE, IN BUSINESS...Word comes from Centerville, Ohio, about the business success of Martin Grunder, a college student who operates a thriving landscaping business. Grunder, a senior finance major at the University of Dayton, cleared $300,000 in gross sales last summer. "I've operated my own business since I was in seventh grade," says Grunder, who began his business career as a grass cutter. Today, he employs about 10 workers. "The darn phone is ringing off the hook," Grunder says.

SPEAKING OF GETTING CLIPPED...Calgene Pacific of Melbourne, Australia, is nearing completion in the breeding of a blue rose. Latest research was to isolate the gene that makes other flowers blue. The blue hue is to be transferred into roses, gerberas, carnations and chrysanthemums. But does Calgene really think, as reported, that a blue rose will fetch $100 per stem? Wake up and smell the roses! A Japanese firm has invested $5 million into Calgene's other gene research that seeks to produce flowers that last longer in the vase. What might those cost?

'Dad' Gill passes away in Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE, Wisconsin
Harry Gill, a founder of the Sports Turf Managers Association and a friend to every athletic turf manager who ever raked an infield, died here of natural causes on Oct. 25.

"His passing represents a great loss to us individually and as an organization," notes Dale Keller Jr., executive director of the STMA. "Under his guiding hand, the association grew in membership and stature. Harry dedicated his life to making it a strong group with a main purpose to educate sports turf managers."

Gill, 69, was planning to retire on Nov. 1.

For the last 16 years of his life, Gill was superintendent of grounds and maintenance for the Milwaukee Brewers at County Stadium here and at Compadre Stadium in Chandler, Ariz. During those final 16 years, he won virtually every major turf award, including Sports Turf magazine's "Man of the Year" in 1990.

A press release from the Brewers aptly notes:

"To the Milwaukee Brewers, his friends and family, Harry Gill will be remembered affectionately as 'Dad,' a warm reception he often used when greeting someone he knew.

"Gill was soft-spoken, but was always able to captivate an audience, whether it was addressing a couple hundred at a convention or a couple in the Brewers' front office. A good-natured, friendly individual, he always found time to share a humorous tale with someone, usually leaving him with a smile. That's what made Harry Gill the king of the hill."

Gill was especially fond in recent years of telling audiences about his experience during the filming of "Major League" at County Stadium, and about his one-on-one conversations with such baseball notables as Henry Aaron.

As a tribute to his leadership, the Harry Gill Turf Scholarship was established in 1987 through the STMA.

Prior to joining the Brewers (where former assistant Gary Vanden Berg becomes his successor), the Milwaukee native was a groundskeeper and facilities director of a 45-hole golf course and 700-seat restaurant in Rockford, Ill.

Mary, his wife of 40 years, has requested that donations be made to the Gill Scholarship Fund or the local heart/diabetes funds or needy food programs.
