The new Sierra® 2500HD. Smart money.

Start running new GMC® Sierra heavy-duty pickups. And the last thing you'll ever run into is risky business.

You see, we offer the most powerful trucks in the ¾-ton and 1-ton working world. That's power defined as the very best, in GVWRs* of 8,600 lbs. through 12,000 lbs.

It's power that translates into a GCWR† of up to 22,000 lbs. That is to say, the absolute best trailer rating. Its new optional Vortec™ 8100 delivers more power and torque than our competitors' V10 gas engines. Basically, Sierra is hyperpowered to keep your business hypercharged.

For true power mongers, there's the optional DURAMAX™ 6600 diesel. The most powerful diesel engine ever put in a pickup, teamed with an available Allison™ transmission to create the most capable, work-eating heavy-duty pickup ever.

Invest in a sure thing. The new Sierra 2500HD.

It's not business as usual

How refreshing it was to see many of your contemporaries at the recent Green Industry Expo and to hear that they're planning for an "anything can happen" year in business. Like a defensive player poised to move in either direction when the ball comes their way, they are ready to move quickly.

You should be, too. These savvy professionals have already prepared two budgets for 2002 — one for growth (usually pretty modest) and one for no growth. Like most entrepreneurs, they are optimistic by nature and hope the economy picks up, but they also know that if our economy continues to stall, they'll need that Plan B to put into place.

I'm just glad they've made those budgets. The worst thing you can do this winter is to act like it's business as usual. As I write this in late November, there are plenty of confusing signals making it really hard to tell which way the economy is moving. Although we all want things to perk up early in 2002, this is one race that's too close to call.

Your best bet

The best way you can spend your winter is to build a realistic budget and decide how you'll achieve it. Your revenue-growing plans may include special sales incentives, different payment options, inventive new service packages or even new services you offer. Your profit-growing plans may mean internal cost cutting, tweaking operations for more efficiency, higher prices or different vendor relationships.

Make sure you understand how business will be different in 2002 and plan accordingly. This isn't the slow season — it's the season for creating change that will safeguard and enhance your business in the future.

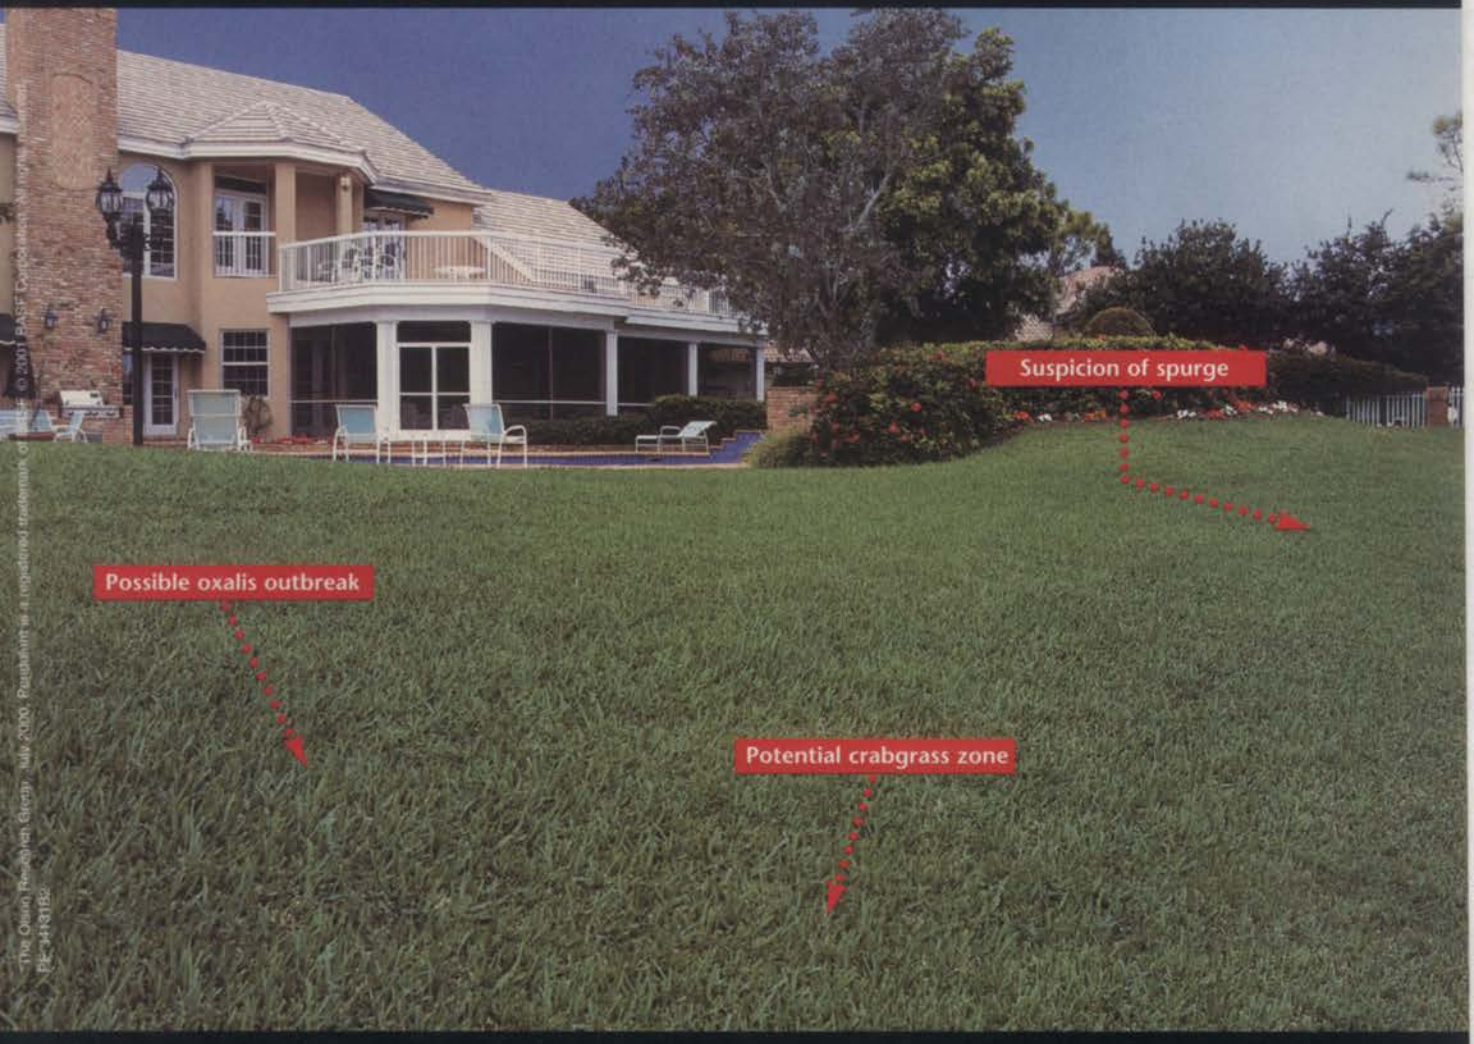
IMPEDE THE SEED.



WEEDS NEVER SEE THE LIGHT OF DAY.

BASF PROFESSIONAL TURF

Lurking just beneath the surface are thousands of tiny weed seeds, threatening to ravage lawns and established ornamentals. Fortunately, Pendulum® preemergent herbicide stops more than 40 broadleaf and grassy weeds dead.

Pendulum is a proven performer, offering well over a decade of unsurpassed, season-long control and unmatched value to maximize your profit margins.

It's a combination that's earned Pendulum a higher satisfaction rating from LCOs than any other preemergent.*

To learn more about how Pendulum can make sure weeds never see the light of day, call 1-800-545-9525, ext. T3257 or visit www.turffacts.com.

OUR BEST DESIGNS COME FROM

It's amazing what can be built when you start with the right foundation.

We've found dirt, rock and grass are the best ones for great equipment. We look at what jobs need to be done. See the problems and create solutions. After the prototypes are made, every machine is tested for thousands of hours. Then come the even tougher tests: Customer feedback sessions. All before they wear the name John Deere.

The new John Deere 280 Skid Steer is one powerful example. It packs 11,600-lb. bucket breakout force into an impressive 90-hp. machine. You can see and reach new heights thanks to a patented vertical lift and unprecedented 360-degree panoramic view. Plus, an impressive 7,000-lb. tipping load

SAFETY
live with it

www.JohnDeere.com/Landscaping combined with an extra-long wheelbase give you the power to handle any Worksite Pro™ attachment. Accomplish any grueling landscape installation job.

UP TO 1400 LB. PAYLOAD*

And what the 280 Skid Steer can't handle, the high-horsepower John Deere tractors certainly can. Year in and year out, these tractors are the finest of their kind. Or in close quarters and small spaces turn to the Gator® Utility Vehicles. They can haul more than their own weight, yet produce less ground pressure than the the human foot.

FAST IMPLEMENT ATTACHMENT AND DETACHMENT

We could go on. But just stop by your John Deere dealer (call 1-800-537-8233 or visit www.JohnDeere.com for one near you). And see the latest from a company that got its start breaking new ground.

BOY, YOU'RE GONNA LOVE THESE BABIES.

Our breeding program has produced some of the finest turfgrass in the industry. We rely on extensive university research and testing to increase characteristics like drought tolerance, disease resistance, and better color. For example, our new certified Princess•77 Hybrid Seeded Bermudagrass is the first and only true hybrid turf-type seeded Bermuda. And just as our Plantation was recently rated at the very top of NTEP's overall quality tests, we expect the new Rebel Exeda to be another top performer in the current National Turfgrass Evaluation Program.

Pennington Seed and our new partner Lofts Seed offer over 125 years of experience in theturfgrass industry. That explains why we deliver the finest products and service available.

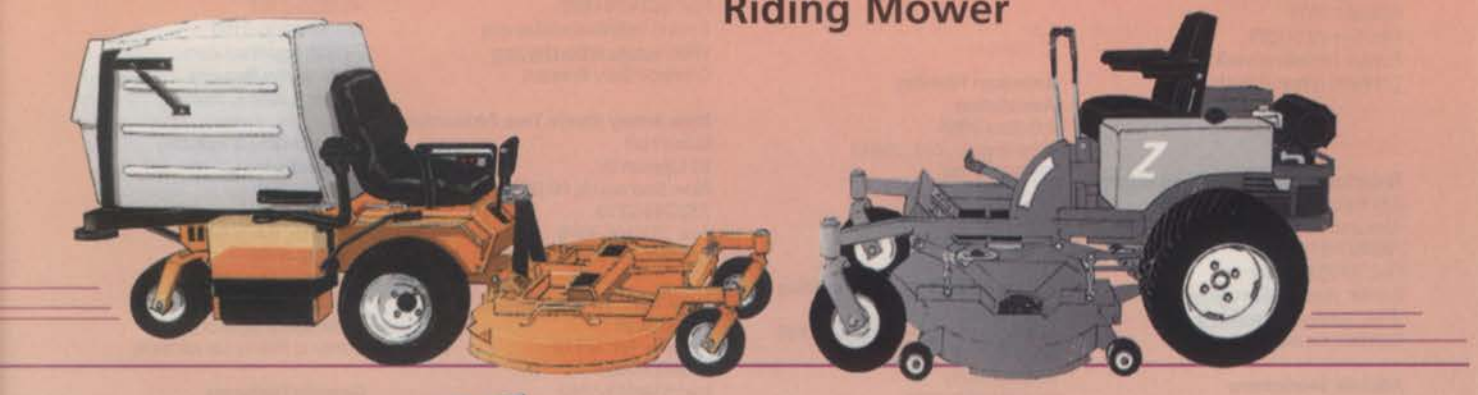
WALKER vs MID-MOUNT

A NOSE-TO-NOSE COMPARISON

Make an honest appraisal
BEFORE... buying a Mid-Mount "Z" Riding Mower



WALKER MANUFACTURING COMPANY

What YOU Should Know About the Walker Mower

- ✓ 22 years on the market
- ✓ 6 models available, 11-26 hp, gasoline or diesel
- ✓ 10 interchangeable mower decks, 36" to 62"; grass collection, side-discharge or mulching
- ✓ Multiple use attachments and a full line of accessories
- ✓ In use throughout the USA, Canada and 20 other countries

These days, to the point of confusion, the commercial riding mower market is filled with Mid-Mount "Z"s. Many of these machines are being sold with empty points of price, ground speed and overkill of horsepower—ignoring true value to the owner.

To help the selection process, Walker has produced a Buyer's Guide (hot off the press). While the Mid-Mount fits some mowing jobs, the Buyer's Guide shows 10 ways the Walker is the better choice for many of today's landscaped properties. Pick up a copy of the Buyer's Guide at your Walker dealer or write or call for your copy today.

Contact vs. systemic fungicides

▶ Contact fungicides are an older type of fungicide also known as protectants that intercept a fungus and prevent it from attacking or getting inside a grass plant. They don't penetrate plant tissues but inhibit fungi by interfering with the growth and development of fungi in a number of ways, i.e., multiple site inhibitors. This creates a very low risk that fungal resistance will develop.

▶ For a fungus to develop resistance, it needs to change its DNA. But contact fungicides are toxic to many different fungi, including many non-target fungi that are beneficial to your turf, and they must be applied frequently.

▶ Systemic fungicides "move" once applied to the turf and redistribute inside the plant. Some fungicides are locally systemic; meaning they only move a few cells away from the point of entry. A carrier is a material upon which the active ingredient is loaded, for the application and the carrier itself can have fungicidal activity and can greatly affect how the active ingredient reacts and enters a plant.

▶ Generally systemic fungicides require 3 to 5 days to become fully effective. To be effective, the disease severity at the time of application must be low, so it is important to scout your turf and look for the start of disease. — Hank Wilkinson

Why fungicides fail in ornamentals

By Bal Rao, Ph.D

Generally, fungicides fail because of the conditions to which they're exposed. Unreasonable expectations can also cause someone to call a fungicide application a failure. By following label specifications and using the process of elimination, you should be able to narrow down or identify the cause(s) of disease management failures. This will help you develop effective disease management strategies and correct or improve future failures.

Some of the following factors may be responsible for poor disease management on ornamentals.

- Not following label specifications
- Not knowing the disease or plants well through improper identification or not understanding resistance, plant sensitivity, disease characteristics or pathogen life cycle.
- Product failure due to improper selection, slow activity, low concentration, failure to penetrate surface, solvent causing phytotoxicity, product age or photodegradation or other breakdown, incompatibility of products, limited activity, short residual effect, label limitations or heavy disease pressure.
- Misunderstanding treatment methods by miscalculating active ingredient, improper or faulty mixing/cleaning, failure to add surfactant or other agents, failure on application, failure to water in, improper equipment or calibration, no follow-up applications, poor plant uptake, rain wash-off, wind drift, soil conditions, improper storage.
- Poor timing in application related to pathogen's life cycle, degree days, extended cool and moist periods favoring disease developments, activity after residual is gone or multiple flushes of pathogen growth.

How to get maximum control of summer weeds

Maximum control of summer annual weeds with preemergence herbicides can be achieved by following these basic guidelines:

1. Apply the product at the recommended time and rate. Weather varies from year to year and it may be necessary to apply earlier than normal. Reference to 30-day weather forecasts can help with this decision.

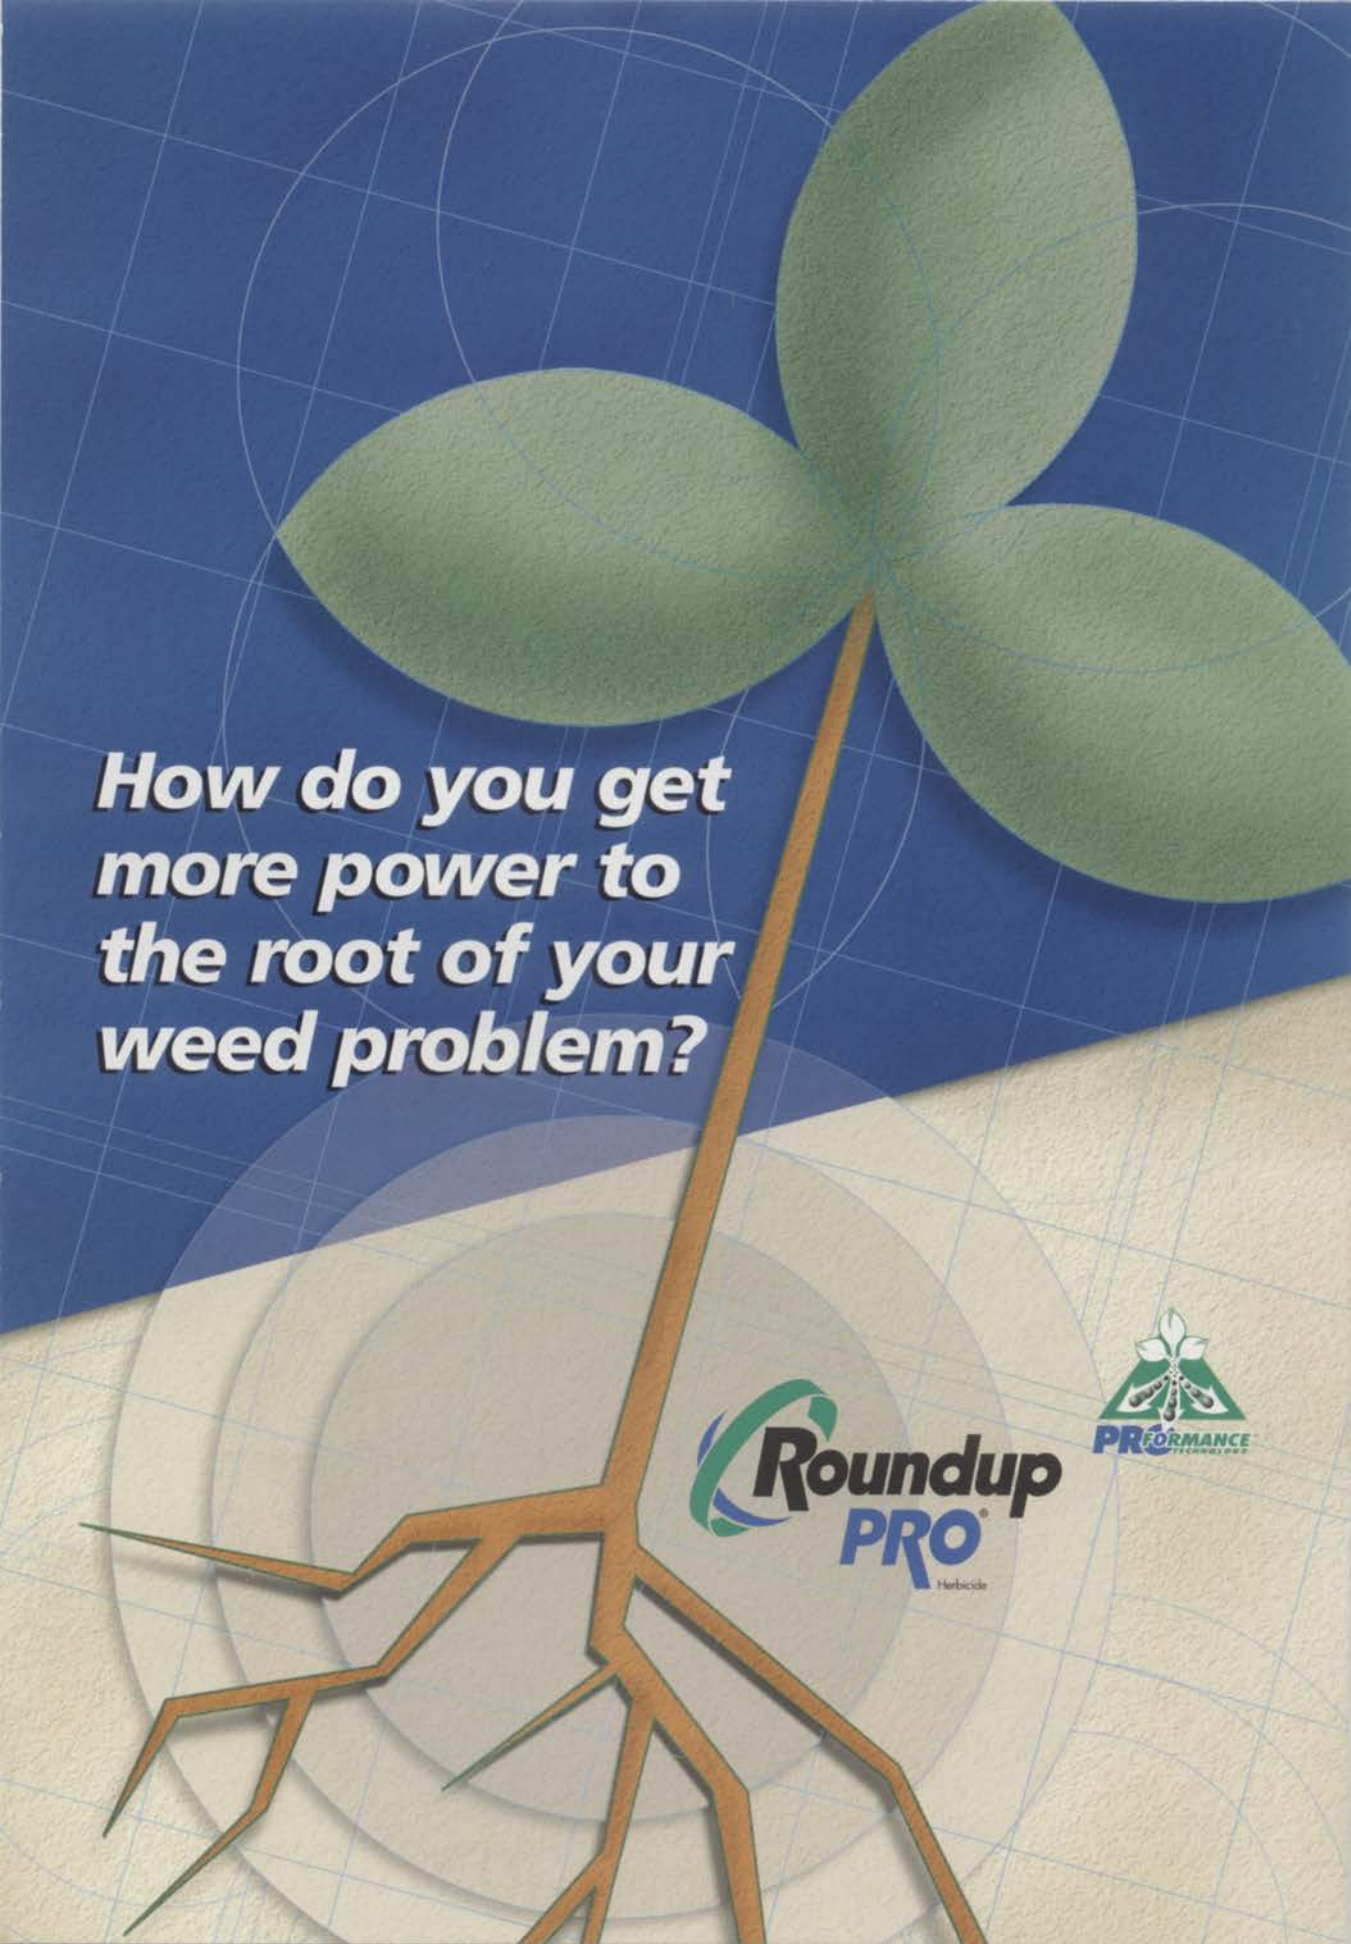
2. Apply the product before rain is expected or water it in with two inches of irrigation water. Numerous instances of poor weed control occur each year because of the lack of rain or an irrigation event within seven days of preemergence application. Additionally, irrigating-in the herbicide is an excellent method to prevent losses due to volatility and lateral herbicide leaching. Turfgrass preemergence herbicides essentially do not leach in downward direction beyond a depth of one to three inches due to binding to soil colloids and organic matter. But they can move laterally, particularly if heavy rainfall occurs shortly after application. Thus, irrigation will usually improve weed control and will help to prevent lateral movement.

3. Calibrate all application equipment. Uniform application is critical to achieving good weed control.

4. If fertilizer/herbicide formulations are to be used, select a product that has uniform particle size. Be sure the product is applied with a sufficient number of particles to ensure even, uniform application. Also, be sure that the herbicide load is sufficient to apply the recommended rate of the product. Johnson and Murphy (1993) showed that dithiopyr rates can be reduced if applied on a dry granular carrier (Table 3). However, with most other preemergence herbicides the amount of active ingredient applied per acre should be the same either for sprayable or dry formulations.

5. Delay mowing until after a rainfall or irrigation event. Studies have shown that mowing and bagging operations can remove significant quantities of a preemergence herbicide if conducted before the herbicide is moved into the soil by rain or irrigation water.

6. Properly maintain the turfgrass. Following recommended cultural practices that promote normal turfgrass growth and development will enable the turfgrass to compete with weeds. The first line of defense against weed infestations has been, and probably always will be, a thick, healthy, properly maintained turfgrass. Adherence to recommended soil fertility and pH levels, proper irrigation, controlling other pests, and mowing at the correct height and frequency will improve the effectiveness of most chemical weed control programs.



How do you get more power to the root of your weed problem?
Roundup PRO®
Herbicide
PROFORMANCE

The proof is in the leaf.[1]

Monsanto scientists used scanning-electron microscopy to photograph the effects of weeds sprayed with Roundup PRO and an imitator. Taken just one hour after application, these images clearly show more formulation in the leaf sprayed with Roundup PRO.

Get Roundup PRO® herbicide with patented PROformance™ technology.

In the first two hours, it delivers three times more power to the roots than Syngenta's latest imitator product.

The proof is in the roots.[2]

Scientists also used autoradiography to photograph and measure the amount of herbicide in the roots two hours after application. Time after time, at least three times more herbicide showed up in the weeds sprayed with Roundup PRO. With the imitator, barely any herbicide has moved to the roots.

Roundup PRO® Herbicide

PROFORMANCE

This is a cross-section of a weed leaf magnified 1000x. The yellow droplets mean Roundup PRO is already at work inside.

This weed, sprayed with the imitator, has almost no droplets in the leaf.

Syngenta's latest imitator product

In the first two hours, almost no imitator herbicide has moved to the roots.

Scientific photography taken two hours after application shows three times more Roundup PRO in the roots. More color means more herbicide.

Always read and follow label directions. Test conducted with MON 77360, EPA Reg #524-475 with comparison to Syngenta product carrying EPA Reg. #10182-449. 1.Test methodology: In scanning-electron microscopy, Monsanto scientists identified penetrated formulations of both Roundup PRO and Touchdown Pro in the mesophyll cell layer. These micrographs support the evidence that formulations containing Monsanto's patented PROformance technology rapidly penetrate the leaf surface. 2.Test methodology: Radiolabeled formulations were applied at equal acid-equivalent rates. Radioactivity was visualized by autoradiography following a simulated rain event two hours after application. Monsanto laboratory tests, 2001. Why herbicides fail

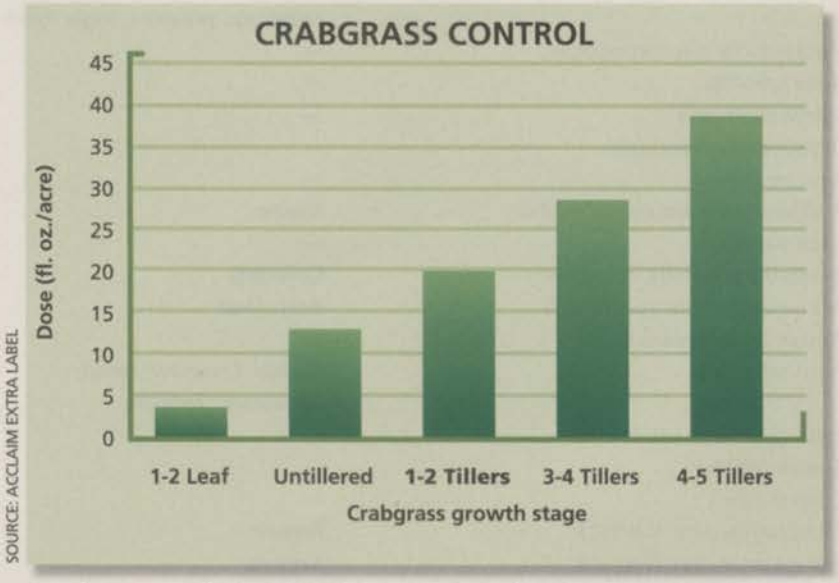
1. Not reading and/or following label specifications
2. Improper weed identification
3. Improper herbicide selection
4. Improper method of application
5. Improper timing of application
6. Unfavorable temperature and/or moisture conditions affecting poor weed growth
7. Age and growth stage of the weed plant — young vs. mature target weed
8. Temperature too hot or too cold
9. Skipped area — spot treating/poor overlapping resulting in poor coverage
10. Foliage not wet — product failed to penetrate leaf hairs
11. Low concentration of mix — not enough active ingredient to manage weed
12. High concentration of herbicide killed the top, not the roots
13. Wind drift — failure to deliver herbicide to the target
14. Rain following application washed off treatment
15. Product too old — deactivated
16. Product caked — spoiled
17. Product separated into layers
18. Chemical and/or physical incompatibility
19. Alkaline (high pH of water) hydrolysis and herbicide degradation
20. Droplet size too large — some herbicides perform better if particle size is finer
21. Improper mixing sequence while using multiple products
22. Insufficient agitation while mixing
23. Past residue in the tank
24. Improper tank cleaning — herbicide residues are difficult to rinse
25. Failure to agitate or shake product containers to mix ingredients before using
26. Failure to add surfactant as needed
27. Weed is difficult to control — morphological, waxy cuticle
28. Failure to incorporate into soil, if required
29. Too much organic matter such as mulch ties up herbicide
30. Product is a contact herbicide and not translocated
31. Pre-emergent activity only
32. Post-emergent activity only
33. Poor systemic activity — foliar vs. root absorbed
34. High temperature closed the stomata opening
35. Large number of weed seeds remains viable in soil for a long time
36. Open bare ground — no mulch or other cover
37. Not post watered in, if needed
38. Water quality of mix — muddy water ties up some herbicides
39. Weed resistance from repeated use of a specific herbicide-resistant biotypes
40. Host plant age — newly planted vs. established trees and shrubs
41. Winter annual weeds in established plantings may need fall or early winter application
42. Booster application not received
43. Booster application not complimentary — e.g. Princep followed by Ronstar
44. Application of herbicide over top of plants may cause injury
45. A combination of pre- and post-herbicides may be needed
46. Insufficient time for the herbicide to act — activity may start in a few days, weeks or may be delayed for a year
47. Weeds blownor carried from nearby areas
48. Susceptible plants — some ground covers may not be labeled
49. Plant with deep growing parts in soil — rhizomes or tubers
50. High weed pressure — too many weed seeds: crabgrass, dandelion or annual bluegrass

— Bal Rao, Ph.D.



As crabgrass grows, higher herbicide doses are required to obtain control. This chart illustrates the doses of Acclaim Extra recommended to control different sized crabgrass plants.

The Evergreen Foundation

Bringing professionals and volunteers together to create green spaces that improve our lives

It's a proven fact:

Green spaces such as public greenways and trails:

- Act as filters to cleanse the air of pollutants
- Act as sound buffers
- Have a calming effect on mind and body
- Are places for recreation as well as enjoyment
- Provide habitat for wildlife that would otherwise be driven away

The Evergreen Foundation is unique among existing organizations working to create new greenways. We harness the skills and resources of professionals in the Green Industry, including manufacturers, and couple them with dedicated volunteers from local communities.

H-2B Workers? We Know The Territory.

Amigos Labor Solutions has been placing reliable, legal seasonal workers for more than 14 years.

One of the reasons for our success is that our recruiters stay in Mexico year round. Our clients never pay extra fees for "travel, food and lodging," and they don't have to bring large numbers of workers over to make it cost-effective. Amigos can bring as few as one or two workers at a time, at NO extra cost.

Call us first, call us last, but call us. When it comes to H-2B, Amigos knows the territory.
