GET THE FEELING THEY KNOW SOMETHING YOU DON'T?

They do. It's their job to know things first and then pass that information on to you fast. Things like new turf management techniques, effective methods of insect and weed control, what really works... and what won't.

LOOK FAMILIAR?

They should. You've seen them often at turf shows, seminars, conventions—wherever industry news is in the making. They're the editorial and sales management team of WEEDS TREES & TURF.

THERE'S NO GRASS GROWING UNDER THEIR FEET.

They apologize for not always being in when you call, but great stories are found in the field, not in the office. These pros know that the only way to really cover the green industry is to get out and be a part of it. From turf test plots in Oregon to the corridors of our nation's capital, they're following the leads, surveying the markets, and interviewing the landscape professionals who make our industry grow. Then, they use their years of experience to pull it all together, analyze and present it to you in a crisp, easy-to-read and easy-to-use style. That way, you have the information you need to do your job better, faster and more effectively.

The next time you want to know something about the green industry, give them a call. If you can't reach them at the office, don't worry. They'll reach you in the pages of WEEDS TREES & TURF.

The pesticide issue

Recent assaults by the nation's media—especially the big three television networks—on pesticide use have brought the professional landscape manager some unwanted problems.

"This happened to me," relates one golf course superintendent, "the day after the story on '20/20' about the Navy lieutenant who allegedly died from exposure to pesticides used on a golf course.

"I got a call from a lawyer whose client had visited us the day before and was now breaking out in a rash. He demanded to know exactly what his client had seen being spread on the course. I think the lawyer had visions of a major killing in the courts.

"Of course, we keep pretty detailed daily records of what's being put down. So I went to my assistant and asked him what that man saw being applied. And do you know what it was? Not insecticide, not herbicide or fungicide. Not even fertilizer. The only thing our crews put on the course the previous day had been sand topdressing! Can you believe that?

"Needless to say, the lawyer didn't bother me again."

The "20/20" story, plus one on the "CBS Evening News with Dan Rather" brought a torrent of response from the green industry.

Jim Brooks, executive director of the Professional Lawn Care Association of America, wrote CBS news director Gordon Sauter. Essentially, he said that the network had no cause to air the story, and that the PLCAA takes the utmost pride in its service.

Brooks received this response from an unbending CBS vice-president Emerson Stone, who answered every point of Brooks' criticism: "Because we do take care in research, I am glad to have your specifics in case we examine this subject again. Thank you for your interest in CBS News. I hope that we do better by you in the future."

This 1986 version of what might be called anti-pesticidism—shoot and ask questions later—can only be met with long-term and very disciplined consumer education. And it is up to the individual lawn care company, landscape contractor and golf course superintendent. That means you.
