Historical Note

Plans for the celebration of MSU's centennial year began in 1950 when President Hannah established the Centennial Committee for preliminary planning. In 1953, Alvie Smith was appointed as Centennial Director. Smith undertook the planning of the centennial until August of 1955 when he was succeeded by Wesley Rowland. The Centennial office under Smith assumed the general supervision and correlation of centennial events, public relations and the completion of a basic history of the college.

The centennial celebration centered around three principle activities: Founder's Day, a series of Academic Symposia and the Centennial of Farm Mechanization Trade Fair. Founder's Day was held on February 12, 1955, the anniversary of the founding of the college. Over 2,000 dignitaries from the fields of education, business, and government gathered for the convocation. Dr. James B. Conant, former President of Harvard University and U.S. High Commissioner to Germany delivered the keynote address "An Old Tradition in a New World". Founder's Day also was the occasion for the issuance of a commemorative stamp honoring Michigan State College and Pennsylvania State University as the pioneer land grant colleges. Ten academic symposia sponsored by various MSU departments dealt with vital educational and world issues. The Centennial of Farm Mechanization Trade Fair featured exhibits by over 250 companies showing how technological development aided the progress of agriculture.

Scope and Contents

The records of Michigan State University's centennial include administrative subject files (1949-1956), files pertaining to the eleven academic symposia held throughout 1955 (1954-1956), reference materials pertaining to anniversary celebrations held by other colleges and universities (1936-1955), and resolutions and correspondence from other institutions congratulating MSU in its centennial year. The collection also contains a great deal of correspondence in the first two series documenting the planning and progress of Founder's Day and the eleven symposia.
