Historical Note

In 1964, Michigan State University signed a contract with the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) to create a research program in plant sciences and a building to house it. In 1966, the Plant Science Laboratory building was completed. In 1975, AEC was replaced by the broader based Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA), which was, in turn, replaced by the Department of Energy in 1978. The name of the Laboratory changed each time, from MSU-AEC to MSU-ERDA, and finally to MSU-DOE.

Scope and Contents

The collection consists of news clippings about the approval of the new laboratory, issues of the Alumni Newsletter, a publication on history of the MSU-DOE plant research laboratory, and abstracts of research for a U.S. Department of Energy site visit. There are photographs the Plant Research Laboratory building and architectural models of the building. Annual reports are also part of this collection.
