Historical Note

Named after its major donors, the Eli and Edythe Broad Art Museum was dedicated on November 10, 2012. The building, its exhibits and programming were planned to transform the campus and the stature of the arts and cultural programming at Michigan State University. Following a competition, Pritzker-Prize winner Zaha Hadid (Zaha Hadid Architects) was selected and announced as the architect on January 15, 2008. Construction was authorized by the MSU Board of Trustees on December 11, 2009 and groundbreaking was held on March 16, 2010. On December 10, 2010, Michael Rush was announced as the new art museum's founding director. Beginning July 1, 2011, the "Countdown to the Broad" programming began and use of the name Kresge Art Museum for the university's art museum was phased out. As the university's art museum, the Eli and Edythe Broad Art Museum inherited the Kresge collection of over 7,000 objects.

Scope and Content

Records in paper and digital formats document the Eli and Edythe Broad Art Museum project, from the initial idea of an addition for the Kresge Art Museum to the planning, construction and dedication of a new facility with a bold design and an expanded mission to advance understanding of our world through the exploration of modern and contemporary art.

These materials were collected by Dr. Linda O. Stanford, Associate Provost for Academic Services, Professor of Art History and the Broad Art Museum Project Coordinator and consist of Broad Art Museum Advisory Team records.

The electronic resource is a documentary produced by WKAR in June 2013. The focus of the documentary is on the implementation and design of the Eli and Edythe Broad Art Museum building located on Grand River Avenue.
